The NCC Education Award in Teaching and Training is a comprehensive professional development course designed for individuals at the start of their teaching careers and experienced lecturers seeking to refresh their skills as part of continuous professional development (CPD).

This course introduces learners to essential teaching practices, providing key insights into supporting student learning in higher education. Participants will learn how to effectively plan and deliver face-to-face lessons, as well as assess and evaluate student performance.

In addition, the course explores the growing importance of online teaching, offering strategies to blend digital tools with traditional classroom methods for a more dynamic learning experience.

The programme is fully online and self-paced, supported by a reflective journal that guides learners throughout their journey, ensuring a practical, thoughtful approach to developing their teaching skills.
